Utah Attorney General Mark Shurtleff Joins Troutman Sanders

December 17, 2012

ATLANTA – December 17, 2012 – Troutman Sanders LLP announced today that Utah Attorney General Mark L. Shurtleff will join the firm in January 2013.

Shurtleff, who was first elected in 2000 as Utah’s chief lawyer, is retiring from public office after three terms and is recognized as an expert in numerous cutting edge legal issues, including energy-related matters. Working with his colleagues on both sides of the political aisle, Shurtleff has won praise for fashioning workable solutions to a variety of problems.

“Mark’s addition will strengthen and enhance Troutman Sanders’ state regulatory expertise in a number of areas, including privacy, data security, state consumer protection issues and matters involving the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau,” said Ashley L. Taylor, Jr., the leader of the firm’s State Attorneys General team as well as its Regulatory Compliance and Government Litigation practice.

Taylor noted that Shurtleff’s experience working with the other states through the National Association of Attorneys General will be of tremendous value to the firm’s clients, especially in multistate investigations. Shurtleff, who will work in the firm’s Washington, D.C., office, will join a State Attorneys General team at Troutman Sanders that includes a former state Attorney General, a former state Solicitor General, a former Deputy Attorney General as well as several former Assistant Attorneys General.
